Pedro Alonso Lopez,

the 'Monster of Andes', who raped and strangled at least 350 young girls in Ecuador, Peru and Columbia, is shown in this world exclusive photograph, in the prison in Ambato, Ecuador, during the twenty years he stayed in solitary confinement. He was secretly to Columbia and released because there is no death penalty in Ecuador. Now Police are using these only pictures ever taken of him, to track him down again. (Photo by Ron Laytner, Edit International).

Heroine Maria Poveda, chosen by the Monster to die because she had a woman's face, has a look of absolute dread and fear on it after she and her mother, behind, helped by a mob of angry Indians, captured the Monster of the Andes in Ecuador. They were photographed at a bonfire celebrating the killer's capture.

Pedro Alonzo Lopez murdered at least 350 young girls. His mighty hands with their long fingers shown in this portrait, squeezed the necks of the girls with such force that about half the fresh bodies recovered had their eyes forced out of their sockets by the pressure. (Photo World Copyright by Ron Laytner, Edit International.)

Detective Pastor Gonzales stayed in a cell with the serial killer, posing as a prisoner. He told me : "For 27 days I hardly slept, afraid I'd be strangled in my sleep. But I tricked Lopez into confessing by pretending I was a rapist too. He boasted to me of murder after murder in Ecuador, Columbia and Peru. It was beyond my wildest nightmares. He told me everything." (Photo World Copyright by Ron Laytner, Edit International.)

Pedro Alonzo Lopez during only interview he ever gave, tries to charm me into coming into his cell. (World Copyright by Ron Laytner, Edit International.)

Dead Cristina was one of 350 young girls murdered by The Monster of Andes. An Ecuadorian policeman points to where she was found.

Dozens of young women were reported missing. Shown here are two of the Monster's 350 victims. Lopez may have killed many more. A number of grave sites where he dumped bodies were paved over or emptied by animals.

Major of Police (now retired) Victor Hugol Lascano, Director of the prison which held Lopez for nearly 20 years, said on his release, "God help young women - Lopez is being freed unrepentant and may soon start killing again."

Lopez would allow my interview on one condition. He wanted the Director's pretty young daughter to come into his cell because he 'hadn't touched a woman in years'. While nervous guards aimed their cocked pistols, the mass serial killer carefully and gently put his powerful hands around the brave girl's wrists.

On Nov. 18, 1978, Leo Ryan and his delegation were about to leave Guyana when they were ambushed at an airstrip by Jonestown gunmen. Ryan, a member of the Parks family, S.F. Examiner photographer Greg Robinson, and two NBC reporters were killed. Tim Reiterman of the S.F. Examiner, who was wounded in the attack, took this photo with Robinson's camera.

The killings at the airport were begun by Larry Layton, in the unbuttoned shirt, above. Though Layton was known to be a Jones loyalist, he insisted on joining Ryan and his group shortly before they headed to the airstrip, saying he wanted to return to the U.S. as well. Once inside the plane, he produced a gun and started shooting. He was joined moments later by members of Jones' Red Brigade security team. Of all the gunmen, only Layton was convicted for the murders.

Around the time of the airstrip attack, Jim Jones gathered devotees into the main pavilion and exhorted them to drink grape punch laced with cyanide.

In the years prior to the tragedy, Jones had obtained a jeweller's license that allowed him to purchase cyanide, used to clean gold. The temple took in a half-pound of the poison each month. Also found at the compound were enormous quantities of potassium chloride. credit <https://murderpedia.org/male/J/j/jones-jim-photos-3.htm>

Adults drank from cups. Those who refused were forced or shot. Syringes were used to spray the poisonous fluid down the throats of babies.

(UPI/ San Francisco Chronicle File 1978)

The next day, Guyanese forces sent to Jonestown found the compound carpeted with bodies.

Enormous stashes of medical equipment and drugs were discovered in the refrigerator (pictured) of Jim Jones' bedroom and throughout his home.

(AP / The Chronicle, File 1978)

Guyana forces also found weapons at the Peoples Temple mission building.

(UPI / The Chronicle, File 1978)

About 870 passports were found by the first searchers to arrive on the scene. The difference between their number and the number of victims can largely be accounted for by the several dozen children born at the compound.

Local residents take a last look at the victims of a church fire, in Kanungu, a small trading town 220 miles southwest of Kampala, Uganda Monday March 20, 2000. More bodies were found Monday outside the hilltop church where several hundred members of a religious cult led by a former prostitute died in a fire. In addition to the 330 charred bodies police had counted, another five were spotted through a hole in a pit latrine on the group's compound in remote southwestern Uganda, said Interior Minister Edward Rugumayo. Ann Bryan. 82-year-old Bryan, was found stabbed to death in her bedroom at St. James Place retirement home, March 21, 1994. Linked to Gillis by confession.

Katherine Hall. Hall's body was found in January 1999 lying face down in the Vignes Lake subdivision in the southeast corner of the parish, near Hoo Shoo Too Road. When Hall was killed, authorities said she lived on the streets and used crack cocaine. Her jacket was found after her death, miles away, hanging near the levee by LSU. Linked to Gillis by DNA.

Hardee Mosley Schmidt. Hardee, 52, disappeared from her Pollard Estates subdivision while taking a jog in May 1999. Her body was found a few days later in a St. James Parish bayou. Linked to Gillis by confession.

Joyce Williams. Hunters in Iverville Parish stumbled upon Joyce Williams' severed leg bone in a patch of woody area on the east bank of the Mississippi River about three miles south of the Plaquemine ferry on January 22, 2000. About 700 feet away, deputies summoned to the site found the rest of the skeleton. Joyce, 36, was seen leaving a home in Oriole Street in Baton Rouge on November 12, 1999. Linked to Gillis by confession.

Lillian Robinson. A fisherman found 52-year-old Robinson's naked body in the Atchafalaya Basin along Interstate 10 between Whiskey Bay and Butte La Rose exits on February 10, 2000. Linked to Gillis by confession.

Marilyn Nevils. The badly decomposed body of Nevils, 38, was found in November 2000 on the Mississippi River levee about a mile south of Ben-Hur Road. Linked to Gillis by confession.

Johnnie Mae Williams. Johnnie Mae, 45, who he said had been a friend for 10 years. Gillis said that when he picked her up on the street in October 2003, she had become a steady user of crack cocaine. He couldn't restrain himself, he said. William's body was found October 11 by a group of people riding four-wheelers off Pride-Port Hudson Road near Green Franklin Road. Linked to Gillis by DNA.

Donna Bennett Johnston. Donna, 43, was found February 27, 2004, strangled in a drainage canal just outside the Baton Rouge city limits, on Ben-Hur road. Johnston, like some of the other victims, let what police classify as a 'high-risk' lifestyle. Linked to Gillis by DNA.

On November 7, 1988, police dropped by the rooming house to check on tenant Bert Montoya, last seen in August. Briefly-satisfied with Puente's explanation - that Montoya had gone home to Mexico - officers returned with shovels five days later, after Peggy Nickerson reported one of her clients as missing.

The first corpse was unearthed November II, with two more recovered the following day. Puente disappeared that afternoon, before she could be taken into custody, and officers kept digging in her absence. By November 14, police had seven bodies in hand. x8
